James Paul. Accused in child attack makes court appearance

A member of an Alberta reserve says people in the community are still angry and in shock following an attack on a six-year-old girl a few days before Christmas.

The man accused of the crime, James Clifford Paul, made his first court appearance Wednesday in Stony Plain, west of Edmonton.

Paul faces charges of attempted murder, aggravated sexual assault and kidnapping.

The 21-year-old appeared briefly on closed-circuit television. The case was put over to Jan. 14 at the request of defence lawyer Arnold Piragoff.

"It's ugly. It's horrible. It's really hard to accept what happened," a woman from Paul First Nation later said outside the courthouse. "When you think about it, you kind of stop breathing for a while.... It's so hard to accept that it happened right at home."

The woman said she's related to both the girl and the accused and went to court to show support for the two families. A publication ban prevents identification of the child and her family.

RCMP have described the attack as "horrific" and said the suspect knew the girl.

Relatives said she was found lying naked in the snow on the reserve Dec. 20. She was near death and flown to the Stollery Children's Hospital in Edmonton, where she remained unconscious for several days.

The girl's grandfather also attended court Wednesday. He said she remains in hospital and may have suffered brain damage. THE CANADIAN PRESS

More collisions mean more work for police

Save by spending?

Councillor says it makes sense 'in theory' that investing in clearing snow will lead to fewer accidents, less time policing crash sites

FLETCHER
robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

Over the last 12 months on record, Calgary saw an average of one car crash every 11 minutes.

Over 12 hours on Tuesday, there was a crash every three minutes and 45 seconds.

That's according to data compiled by Calgary police, who say it's not uncommon for the first major snowfall of the season to bring with it a major spike in reported collisions.

"What I've found over the years is that when the snow first falls, people have — for whatever reason — a hard time adjusting to that," traffic-section Staff Sgt. Paul Stacey said. "We always see a larger number of collisions."

Subsequent snowfalls tend to see fewer crashes, he added, as drivers get used to the conditions.

"It really normalizes over the course of the winter as people start to adjust," Stacey said.

Each reported collision — even a minor one that doesn't require officers to attend the scene of a crash — results in multiple man-hours of work for police, Stacey said, between collecting driver and witness statements, administration, data entry and filing.

"If you follow the trail, one report creates a lot of work," he said.

Coun. Sean Chu, a former police officer who has handled collision reports himself, said the process is indeed time-consuming, and the city might save money on policing if it spent more on clearing and sanding roads, but it's hard to say for sure.

"If you invest more on the plowing, in theory, you assume there would be less accidents," he said. "I don't know if we have any evidence of that but, in theory, it makes sense."

The question, Chu added, is how much the extra spending on road-clearing would save on policing.

Stacey said that's "almost impossible" to answer definitively, but given how "enormous" Calgary is, significantly improving road conditions city-wide would come with an equally significant cost.

"I'm not sure what the trade-off would be versus going through what we seem to go through every year, and that's a large number of collisions at the beginning and then it seems to level off," Stacey said.

By the numbers

Over the last 12 months of available data (October 2013 to September 2014), 47,229 collisions were reported to Calgary police — that works out 129 per day, on average.

- From 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Tuesday (when about 10 centimetres of snow fell on the city), there were 193 reported collisions.

Man charged after attempted carjackings

Police say they have laid several charges against a man who was attempting to carjack vehicles outside of Sunridge Mall on Tuesday evening.

A news release from the Calgary Police Service explained that at about 7:15 p.m., they were called to the area for an attempted carjacking.

Police say a suspect allegedly tried to steal "several cars" by threatening drivers as they were getting in or out of their vehicle.

At one point, police say several citizens confronted the man who pepper-sprayed the group in an attempt to flee.

The man then ran into the mall where he was met by security guards. Police say he then travelled back to the mall parking lot, again attempting to open car doors.

Security managed to hold the accused until police arrived.

Forty-year-old Carmen Lawrence Briault is facing charges including assault with a weapon, robbery and possession of a weapon or imitation for a dangerous purpose.

Emergency crews are cleaning up spilled glue from a 23-car train derailment in east-central Alberta.

The CN cars carrying a variety of freight came off the rails about 160 kilometres east of Edmonton near Wainwright. There are no reports of injuries.

A CN release says environmental teams are cleaning up liquid adhesive released from one of the cars, the only one to have spilled its contents.

The 114-car train was on its way to Saskatoon from Edmonton when it derailed.

An investigation is ongoing.

Calgarians stand in solidarity

'They can be proud of themselves.' Scores gather at vigil for murdered Charlie Hebdo journalists

ROBSON FLETCHER

robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

More than 100 people, many from Calgary's French community, gathered outside city hall Wednesday to stand in solidarity with the at least 12 people killed at the offices of the Charlie Hebdo satirical news magazine in Paris, and vow to carry on the ideals of their work.

"Today is a very sad day and we felt the need to get together to show our solidarity, to show our support with the victims in France," organizer Fanny Ratisseau said.

"They knew they were threatened but they said, 'I won't get on my knees ... I will stand up for my freedom of speech,'" she added. "They got killed doing their jobs, but they can be proud of themselves."

Marie Melotte, whose husband is French and whose parents are originally from Mauritius, a former French colony, said she couldn't begin to understand what motivated the attackers.

"There's nothing to understand in it. There's nothing to justify in it, Melotte said. "These people thought that by killing people, they would kill the newspaper, but you don't kill freedom of expression like that.... The ideas that this newspaper put forward outlive the people that were involved."

Charlie Hebdo raised the ire of some Islamic extremists by publishing caricatures of the prophet Muhammad. Its offices were firebombed in November 2011 and its editor, Stephane Charbonnier, has received numerous death threats, but the magazine has refused to shy away from satirizing any topic — or religious figure.

Calgary-Centre MP Joan Crockatt, herself a former journalist, described the attack as an "outrage" and "barbaric act" and thanked people at the vigil for attending.

"All of you are doing a very important thing by being out here tonight to show your support for the families and to show that you are united in telling the world that we will not bow to terrorist acts," Crockatt told the crowd.

Roy Klassen is the honorary consul for France in Calgary, a voluntary position in the city, where there is no official French consulate.

He was at the vigil Wednesday and didn't hesitate to describe the Charlie Hebdo journalists as heroes.

"I think they're courageous people who set aside their own comfort and safety to express their ideas in what they thought was a safe place to do so, and put down their lives for freedom of the press," Klassen said.

Suspect's ex-partner

Strathmore murder victim identified

Strathmore RCMP said the female victim of a murder was in a previous relationship with the man now charged in her death.

Glenn Randall, 52, was arrested and charged with first degree murder in the death of 49 year-old Brenda Walker. Walker was found dead in her Strathmore residence after a 1 a.m. call to RCMP Tuesday.

Although still unclear, RCMP have suggested Walker called 911 herself as she was the only person found in the home.

Walker and Randall had been in a previous relationship, police said. Walker ended that relationship in late 2014. There was no previous reported history of domestic violence to the Strathmore RCMP.

Randall has been scheduled to make his first appearance in court on Jan. 20 in Strathmore.

Police are asking anyone with more information to contact the Strathmore RCMP at 403-934-3968 or Crime Stoppers.

Guerilla-style exhibition invades public spaces

Blackfoot, by Brittney Bear Hat, features a photo of the artist's ancestors from the eponymous tribe in formal regalia overlaid with a photograph of the Blackfoot Trail and Glenmore Trail intersection. It is installed on a billboard near the site of the photo. CONTRIBUTED

Artists are taking over public spaces in Calgary, some whispering with small political statements, others pointing out social injustices on unavoidable billboards.

The 2014 Calgary Biennial exhibition isn't happening in a gallery. There aren't hours of operation, or artist statements written on the walls.

Instead, this $20,000 grant-funded project is taking place on city streets, bus shelters and in unexpected public spaces.

"From the beginning it's kind of been a tongue-in-cheek endeavour," curator Steven Cottingham said. "I kind of wanted to demonstrate the public realm doesn't have to be this space for ads or information or future property developments."

Cottingham likened the concept to graffiti — art that can't wait and has an urgency behind it.

The underlying theme for the exhibition follows lines of racial and LGBTQ issues, he said, exposing what artists see as society's blunders.

You may have noticed some of the exhibits already — giant billboards usually reserved for advertisements on your daily commute, suspect-looking City of Calgary public notice printouts, or the threads tied around fingers of statues.

But if you haven't yet spotted the works of the Calgary Biennial, you're not alone.

"I want to believe people are noticing, but really I can't tell, other than my own social circle," Cottingham said. "And I sort of like the idea that it's not a very clearly delineated event."

The three-month project features works of 16 artists and groups. It started Dec. 1 and will continue until March 31.

To keep up to date with the project, follow the Facebook group at facebook.com/calgarybiennial.

T.S. Eliot. Complex poem takes centre stage

In 1922, American poet T.S. Eliot published a piece that captivated a generation of youth so deeply affected by World War I.

Written as a reaction to The Great War, Eliot's The Waste Land is a sprawling, complex poem that became hugely influential in British literature and is considered one of modern poetry's most important works. However, it has rarely been performed on stage.

But complicated material has never deterred the One Yellow Rabbit (OYR) theatre company. In fact, director Blake Brooker was eager to take on the challenge of bringing the poem to life as part of OYR's latest production, What the Thunder Said, which runs Jan. 13 to 30 at Big Secret Theatre.

"People say it's impenetrable," Brooker says. "And it is difficult, but once you live with the thing for awhile, it reveals itself. It's like an archaeological dig, going back to this piece that used to be so famous and thinking, 'Does it have resonance now?'"

What the Thunder Said was originally meant to be part of a massive World War I centennial project involving theatre companies from across Europe and North America. The companies were asked to create works that tried to answer the questions, "What, if anything, has society learned from WWI, and what remnants of that terrible war still exist today?"

The project was shelved in 2013, but Brooker says the One Yellow Rabbit troupe found the subject fascinating and decided to continue developing their idea, which evolved into a triptych, featuring text, a word-less movement segment and a performance of the poem.

"The more we looked at it, the more we thought, 'Okay, a performance can be arranged with The Waste Land as a focal point to examine larger concepts and issues in a theatrical fashion,'" Brooker says.

Beau Dixon will never forget the day he brought his one-man play, Beneath Springhill: The Maurice Ruddick Story, to Springhill, N.S.

Sitting in the front two rows of the theatre were children and relatives of the play's protagonist and hometown hero who helped save a group of trapped miners in 1958.

"I was having a mild heart attack," says the actor and musician who wrote and stars in the 45-minute musical drama, which runs from Jan. 12 to 24 at Lunchbox Theatre as part of the High Performance Rodeo.

"I knew if these guys didn't like it, I'd have to start over."

Thankfully for Dixon, the audience loved it, and he's performed the play several times since its premiere in 2013.

Beneath Springhill is based on the true story of Ruddick, an African-Canadian who was trapped for nine days after a subterranean tremor, also known as a "bump," collapsed shafts in the Springhill Mine.

The father of 12 sang songs to help keep his fellow miners' spirits up. After he and other survivors were rescued, Ruddick became a celebrity and was named Canadian of the Year.

Although racism reared its ugly head in the months and years following Ruddick's mine escape (he was offered a free vacation to Jekyll Island in Georgia, but when the segregationist governor realized Ruddick was black, the miner was almost disinvented), Dixon instead chose to focus on Ruddick's heroism and the positive impact he made on the community.

"It was just a fascinating story, the fact that he did a very heroic deed," says Dixon.

"Not because he was looking to be a hero but because he was acting on instinct and just wanted to see his family again."

Alberta's renovated Federal Building to take staff, MLAs starting in February

After six years, four premiers and an estimated cost of $375 million, the Alberta government is set to start moving people into the renovated historic Federal Building.

Dave Prisco, spokesman for Alberta Infrastructure, said Wednesday that final tests and fixes are underway on the building, located a stone's throw from the legislature. Staff are to begin moving in Feb. 1.

"We've taken it over, but they're still doing interior work," said Prisco.

The building made national headlines last year when it was revealed former premier Alison Redford's office had ordered revisions to transform the top floor into a penthouse retreat for Redford and her daughter.

The penthouse came to light shortly after Redford resigned last March amidst a party and caucus revolt.

The top floor has been returned to its original configuration. The refurbished 1950s, 11-floor structure will be the work space for 600 people, including opposition MLAs and government backbenchers.

Work began in 2009 at a cost of $356 million, but it proved to be a controversial and expensive renovation that absorbed millions of dollars in cost overruns.

The renos were scaled back to $275 million as the province grappled to balance the budget before increasing costs to the current $375-million estimate.

The building was initially expected to open in the fall of 2011. THE CANADIAN PRESS

robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

Robbed of about $10,000 in cash at a time of year when donations typically slow down, Calgary's Women In Need Society (WINS) is seeking support from the community and has received several major boosts so far.

The non-profit organization that helps women through a variety of programs and services saw three of its buildings broken into in late December, just after Christmas.

Thieves made off with a safe in the first break-in and keys to the other buildings that they used in the two subsequent break-ins, according to police, who have put out a public call for help in identifying three culprits caught on surveillance camera.

WINS executive director Laura Dickson said "the biggest loss" was the cash that was stolen.

"It sets us back in terms of what we're going to be able to accomplish in January," she said. "We use that cash to fund our programs and services that we deliver through our family resource centres, so that's helping women and their families meet basic needs."

This week, she said WINS received two major donations to help make up the loss — one from a donor who wished to remain anonymous for now and another from a local furniture store.

"McArthur Fine Furniture has offered to deliver us a big truckload of furniture and household items within the next two weeks that we'll be able to sell in our thrift stores," she said. "So that's a big donation for us."

WINS is also accepting online cash donations and asking Calgarians to continue donating "gently used, good-quality" items for resale in its thrift stores.

"We generate 75 per cent of our operating revenue here through sales in our thrift stores," Dickson said.

Energy East pipeline
only reliable option,
says Quebec board

Quebec's energy regulator came out in favour of the Energy East pipeline on Wednesday, calling the TransCanada Corp. project "desirable."

The company is aiming to link up to 1.1-million barrels a day of Alberta crude to export terminals and refineries in Quebec and New Brunswick through the pipeline.

For about two-thirds of the way, an existing segment of natural-gas pipe would be converted to oil service, with new pipe to be built through Quebec and New Brunswick.

Reaction against the project has emerged on various issues, including the need to protect a beluga habitat in Quebec's St. Lawrence River, where plans to build one export terminal have been put on hold.

There are also concerns about the impact of the pipe conversion on gas consumers in Central Canada.

The Regie de l'energie estimates the demand for natural gas in Quebec will grow by about two per cent annually between now and 2030 and that the only reliable option is to buy gas from outside Quebec and bring it into the province via TransCanada's network.

It also stated that shale gas in Quebec and natural gas from Anticosti Island "cannot be considered reliable supply options ... notably because of issues related to economic viability, the environment and social acceptability."

The energy regulator did not look into the route of the pipeline or study the potential environmental consequences of the project.

B.C. top doc defends flu shot policy

Effectiveness. Chief medical officer calls argument of nurses
union chief 'illogical'

THANDI
Metro in Vancouver

British Columbia's top doctor is speaking out against calls from the B.C. Nurses' Union to revise the province's mandatory flu-shot or mask policy for health-care workers.

Chief medical officer Dr. Perry Kendall says he is "disappointed" by calls from union president Gayle Duteil for the government to change the policy, especially when the circulating H3N2 strain is hitting seniors so hard.

"It makes no sense to me," Kendall told Metro. "We should be doing everything in our power as health-care workers to protect those vulnerable people."

The policy was launched by the B.C. government in 2012, making it mandatory for health-care workers at publicly funded facilities to get a flu shot or wear a mask to help protect patients. Similar policies are in place in more than a dozen hospitals in Ontario and a health authority in New Brunswick.

Duteil's comments come as influenza is hitting Canada hard this year due to a virus that has "genetically drifted" from the H3N2 strain covered by this year's vaccine. As a result, this year's flu shot offers an estimated 40 per cent protection instead of the typical 80 per cent.

While the union supports immunization, Duteil said health-care workers should be able to rely on frequent hand washing to prevent the spread of illness.

"It's about choice, and now that we know that vaccination is even less effective in preventing flu, forcing nurses to get one doesn't make sense," she said.

Kendall called Duteil's statement "illogical."

"I would rather have 40 per cent protection than zero protection," he said. "Ideally, we would have a vaccine that provided really high levels ... (but) we don't have one of those yet. The one we've got now is still the best we can use."

Halifax. Major house fire leaves 2 dead, 1 missing

Two people are dead and another person is unaccounted for as Halifax firefighters and police investigate a major blaze outside the city.

Halifax regional fire personnel were called to the home in the 5,000 block of Guysborough Road — near what is known locally as Wyse's Corner — around 4:30 p.m. on Wednesday. As of 9:45 p.m., 10 fire trucks and 30 firefighters were still on scene battling the blaze, which is located about an hour outside of Halifax.

Fire spokesman Brendan Elliott confirmed that at least two people have died.

"We just haven't had a chance to go through the house in its entirety," he said. "Because of the safety and security of the building, they are still putting out hot spots."

RCMP spokeswoman Cpl. Karine Bernier says a third person remains unaccounted for.

Elliott said they were called about the fire by someone driving by the home.

He said the home has a metal roof which has made it a difficult one for them to tackle.

"We were still in a defensive mode an hour and a half into the fire," he said.

Study's conclusion.

A third of world's oil reserves, half of gas reserves and 80 per cent of coal reserves should remain unused

British researchers have concluded that most of Canada's oil sands will have to be left in the ground if the world gets serious about climate change.

The report, in the journal Nature, says three-quarters of Canada's oil reserves and 85 per cent of its oil sands can't be burned if the world wants

Quoted

"Every country can't exploit all of their domestic reserves and keep to two degrees."

Report author Christophe McGlade of University College London to limit global warming. It adds one-quarter of Canada's natural-gas reserves and four-fifths of its coal would also have to be left in the ground.

The report concludes that no country's Arctic energy resources can be developed if global temperature increases are to be kept manageable.

Report author Christophe McGlade of University College London says the research was undertaken in response to agreement from politicians around the world that global warming should be limited to within 2 C of historic averages. At the same time, said McGlade, most are enthusiastic boosters of their own country's fossil fuels.

"What this analysis shows is that those two positions are inconsistent," he said.

The study is the latest into the implications of the total amount of carbon emissions that can be released and still stay below a two-degree temperature increase.

Cosby cheered in Ontario, kicks off tour amid protests

Bill Cosby was greeted with cheering and applause as he walked on stage Wednesday night in Kitchener, Ont., wearing a grey sweatshirt with the phrase "hello friend."

Cosby was set to stare down local opposition as he kicked off the first of three Ontario shows amid brewing tensions and mounting allegations of sexual assault.

"First of all, thank you," he said emphatically, before launching into jokes about the cold Canadian weather.

The comedian promised fans "the show of their life" ahead of his first time on stage since November, but a number of ticket holders announced plans to skip the performance, while others sought to sell their tickets.

Nonetheless, a steady flow of ticket holders streamed into Kitchener's Centre In The Square, walking past a handful of protesters hoisting signs that read "rape is not a joke" and "I support the victims." Police officers were also present, as were a swarm of journalists.

At one point three protesters temporarily blocked the main doors into the venue while one woman heckled ticket holders, saying they should be "ashamed" of going to see Cosby. In recent weeks, at least 18 women — including three who came forward in Los Angeles on Wednesday — have accused the 77-year-old Cosby of sexually assaulting them, with some allegations dating back decades.

Cosby is also scheduled to perform in London, Ont., on Thursday and Hamilton, Ont., on Friday, and protests are planned in both cities.

Tory donors on Nutrition North board

The board that advises the federal cabinet minister in charge of Canada's controversial Nutrition North food-subsidy program is almost entirely made up of Conservative donors, public records show.

Five of the six people appointed to the Nutrition North advisory board have donated money to the Conservatives.

One of the five Conservative donors also gave to the Liberals, while a sixth member has not contributed to any party.

The individual donations range from $20 to $1,200 and span a time frame of February 2007 to July 2014.

And at least three board members, who get expenses but no salary for their work, appear to be involved with organizations or businesses that have received federal government funding, either directly or indirectly.

The Nutrition North program, a $60-million annual food-subsidy intended to help offset the high cost of nutritious food in the North, has been under scrutiny ever since auditor general Michael Ferguson's fall report came out.

In it, Ferguson revealed that the program's overseers are largely in the dark about whether Nutrition North is actually doing anything for the people who need it the most. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Explosive-laden bus driven into police academy

Yemen. At least 37 killed and 66 wounded, most of whom were academy recruits, say police

A suicide bomber rammed a minibus carrying explosives into a gathering of recruits outside a police academy in the heart of Yemen's capital on Wednesday, killing at least 37 people in the latest attack to hit Sanaa.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the attack, but Yemen's local al-Qaida branch has carried out similar assaults in the past against the army and police in this impoverished Arabian Peninsula country, viewing them as U.S. proxies.

The U.S. provides counterterrorism training and assistance to Yemeni forces, and frequently carries out drone strikes targeting al-Qaida militants in Yemen.

At the scene of the blast, the dead and wounded lay on a sidewalk against a wall. On the pavement, water sprayed by firefighters to extinguish the blaze from the explosion of the minibus mixed with pools of blood.

A charred taxi cab smouldered near what remained of the minibus, metres from the gate of the police academy, which is located in a residential area.

The bomber struck as cadets were lined up outside the academy, preparing to enrol, witnesses said.

"It went off among all of them, and they flew through the air," said eyewitness Jamil al-Khaleedi.

Police Brig. Gen. Abdulaziz al-Qudsi said at least 37 people were killed and 66 wounded. Another official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said at least three civilians were among the dead.

Tribal leaders and Yemeni officials have said the rising power of Shiite rebels known as Houthis, their advance into Sunni areas and the backlash over drone strikes has caused al-Qaida to surge in strength and find new recruits. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bus driver loses control, 16 dead

A passenger bus veered off a road and fell into a gorge in southeastern India on Wednesday, and at least 13 of the 16 people killed were college and middle-school students, police said.

More than 50 other people were injured in the crash near the town of Penukonda in Andhra Pradesh state, said Police Inspector G.R. Yadav.

The state-run public transport bus was carrying 68 people when the driver lost control of the vehicle, which then plunged into the gorge, he said.

Police said the road was under repair and part of it was dug up, which may have forced the driver to move to the edge.

The driver died in the accident.

Suspect in Paris attack that killed 12 surrenders: Official

France. Police continue to search for two others also suspected in attack on satirical newspaper Charlie Hebdo

Two heavily armed men in black, their faces hidden by ski masks, take down a police officer on a Paris sidewalk with a spray of bullets. One walks up to the victim, who is sprawled on the ground, and delivers a final shot to the officer's head despite the arm raised in a final plea for mercy.

The cold-blooded killing Wednesday came just after a massacre minutes earlier in the offices of the satirical French weekly Charlie Hebdo.

Eight journalists, two police, a maintenance worker and a visitor were killed, said prosecutor François Molins. He said 11 others were wounded — four of them seriously.

The newspaper's editor and cartoonist Stéphane Charbonnier, widely known by his pen name Charb, was among those killed.

The killers were heard crying "Allahu akbar!" — Arabic for "God is great!" — and saying they were avenging the Prophet of Islam, a video shows.

Early Thursday, French police released photographs of brothers Said and Cherif Kouachi, in their early 30s, saying they should be considered armed and dangerous. A third suspect, Mourad Hamyd, 18, surrendered voluntarily, said Paris prosecutor's spokeswoman Agnès Thibault-Lecuire.

In a sombre address to the nation Wednesday, President

François Hollande pledged to hunt down the killers, and pleaded with his compatriots to come together in a time of insecurity and suspicion.

Schools closed across Paris, although thousands jammed République Square near the

"This is the darkest day of the history of the French press," said Christophe DeLoire of Reporters Without Borders.

Paper's evocative style

Charlie Hebdo has a long history of provocation

The French newspaper Charlie Hebdo's staple is provocation — and it pokes fun at popes, presidents as well as the Prophet Muhammad.

The satirical weekly has a history of drawing outrage across the Muslim world with crude cartoons of Islam's holiest figure.

The magazine's offices were firebombed in November 2011 after it published a spoof issue that "invited" Muhammad to be its guest editor and put his caricature on the cover.

A year later, the magazine published more Muhammad drawings amid an uproar over an anti-Muslim film. The cartoons depicted Muhammad naked and in demeaning or pornographic poses.

As passions raged, the French government defended free speech even as it rebuked Charlie Hebdo for fanning tensions.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Charlie Hebdo. Cartoonists commend evocative style

"I thought, 'Oh jeez, it's finally happened.'"

Wes Tyrell had gotten a late start in his studio when he began receiving messages and calls from friends in the cartoonist community about the massacre at the French satirical magazine Charlie Hebdo.

Tyrell, a cartoonist for Yahoo News and head of the Association of Canadian Editorial Cartoonists, has long been a fan of Charlie Hebdo. Not necessarily a fan of every cartoon, he makes sure to say, but of its provocative style and, especially, the courage of its staff to stand up to violence and threats.

Charlie Hebdo's cartoonists have always been as provocative as they could be, as provocative as cartoonists ever get, Tyrell said.

In one cartoon, for example, a naked Prophet Muhammad is bending over with a star over his anus and the text, in French, reads "A star is born."

The cartoonists have been "equal opportunity offenders" who lampooned not only Islam, but other religions as well along with French political figures, Tyrell said.

"They were very, very eager to go after just about anybody, but the difference being, not everybody out there is trying to kill them," he said.

Michael de Adder, a Canadian political cartoonist, questions if anyone will be willing to continue in Charlie Hebdo's footsteps.

"If they did, they'd certainly have a big target on themselves," he said. "It would be courageous to restart it."

Canada's Ambassador to France, Lawrence Cannon reacted on Twitter saying he was horrified by the attack and his thoughts were with the victims and their families.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper issued a statement condemning the attack.

"I am angered and saddened to hear of the terrorist attack today in the offices of the Parisian news magazine Charlie Hebdo, which has killed at least 12 individuals, including two police officers," Harper's statement read.

Official opposition leader Thomas Mulcair held a press conference in which he condemned the attack. Liberal leader Justin Trudeau and Green Party leader Elizabeth May also issued statements decrying what happened and offering their sympathy.

Schorderet said the outpouring of support from Canadians has touched the embassy deeply.

THE WAR AGAINST FREE PRESS

A dozen people lost their lives in Paris Wednesday over cartoons. Metro grieves with the rest of the world and reaffirms the importance of freedom of expression

FERNANDO CARNEIRO
readers@metronews.ca

I'm a lifelong fan of editorial cartoons. They have made me laugh, made me question my viewpoints and moved me deeply.

I have been sad and angry since seeing Twitter headlines about 12 people, mostly journalists, shot dead by extremists in France.

There's the horrific loss of life — the killing of people who worked every day to stimulate minds through their craft. Then there's the attempt at intimidation — the killers' effort to silence people who ask questions.

Asking questions is how we learn and evolve. This freedom must be defended.

I'm not just a fan of editorial cartoons, I'm a believer in what they represent.

Editorial cartoons aren't necessarily meant to be funny, although they can be; they are commentary. The cartoons being distributed around the world today are good examples.

Of Wednesday's editorial cartoons, I was most affected by the one drawn by Carlos Latuff. It shows the gunmen firing at the offices of Charlie Hebdo, a trail of blood, and the bullets eventually going through the walls and hitting a mosque behind it.

I hope it doesn't happen, but I imagine innocent Muslims will now face a backlash.

If violence breeds violence, I'm certain that editorial cartoonists will continue to raise their pencils and take aim at that, too.

Don't call attack 'barbaric': Prof

JOE LOFARO
readers@metronews.ca

A Carleton University professor says world leaders such as Prime Minister Stephen Harper should not describe the deadly attack on a Paris news magazine that killed 12 people Wednesday morning as a "barbaric" act.

Karim H. Karim, a professor at the university's School of Journalism and Communication, said when the word is used to condemn religiously motivated acts of violence, some religious groups interpret it to mean that they as a whole are barbaric.

Video footage of the attack appeared online showing a man wearing a hood carrying an assault rifle shoot and kill a police officer on a Paris sidewalk at point-blank range. Three attackers killed Charlie Hebdo's veteran cartoonists, editor and others at the magazine's office after recent publications of cartoons depicting Islamic figures in controversial ways.

Harper and French president François Hollande called the Paris attack "barbaric" in statements Thursday.

"I don't think it's being helpful to basically cast these words out. When leaders do this a lot of people are listening," said Karim in an interview with Metro.

"When 'barbaric' gets attached to them, these are the kind of stereotypes and images that are being built up. What is achieved by using rhetoric like that?"

Although the attack received praise by supporters of the militant Islamic State group, no specific group has immediately claimed responsibility for it.

Karim, a former journalist who teaches communications studies, denounced the attacks, calling them "heinous."

But he argued that using words such as "violent" and "cruel," would be more appropriate than "barbaric," which has a "moralistic tone which pits one civilization against another."

Karim did not say the media should outright ban the publication of the cartoons, but he said there needs to be a context justifying why they should be reproduced.

"I would not say never do this," he said.

"I think if we have very strong convictions and we are justified in what we feel we should be doing, then we should do it."

Cosby's TV wife defends him and raises conspiracy theory

Phylicia Rashad, Bill Cosby's TV wife, has kept mum on the allegations of years of sexual assault plaguing the comedian.

But at the prodding of Showbiz 411's Roger Friedman, she's reconsidering her previous position about not wanting "to become part of the public debate."

So where does she stand? Firmly in Camp Cosby.

Of course, it's not enough for Rashad to just dismiss the accusations from the numerous women claiming Cosby abused them over the past few decades, she also has to suggest some sort of greater conspiracy going on.

"Forget these women. What you're seeing is the destruction of a legacy. And I think it's orchestrated," Rashad says. "Someone is determined to keep Bill Cosby off TV. And it's worked. All his contracts have been cancelled."

As for her old gig on The Cosby Show, Rashad says, "This show represented America to the outside world. This was the American family. And now you're seeing it being destroyed. Why?"

Maybe it's the Illuminati?

Aniston awash with fears after her near-fatal tricycle accident: Honest!

Jennifer Aniston is finally speaking out about a debilitating fear that has kept her from enjoying the thrill and adventure of scuba diving.

"I basically have a real fear of going underwater," she admitted during a recent post-screening Q&A for her film, Cake, according to E! News.

"I was a kid, and I was riding this tricycle around a swimming pool, and I drove my tricycle into the swimming pool, and I didn't let go and my brother tried to (help me). So I can't go underwater and no one will believe me. I honestly can't."

Church convinces Cruise to dig himself a giant hole

I thought it had been a while since we'd had a good "Tom Cruise does something crazy" story. Good news, there's a new one.

The Edge of Tomorrow star reportedly spent millions on an underground bunker beneath his Beverly Hills mansion, thought to be a doomsday hideout encouraged by the Church of Scientology, according to Radar Online.

The site got hold of permit documents filed with the City of Beverly Hills that show a massive amount of work excavating the bedrock under Cruise's tennis court to build a structure that includes a gym, laundry facilities and two bedrooms.

"When something goes down, they know they're going to need a place to hide out," explains former Scientologist Marc Headley.

But until then, how about some bunker parties, Tom?

Leaping off the page and into the multiplex

Film adaptations. Put down your bookmarks and head to the movie theatre: A giant crop of novels is coming to the big screen this year

A selection from the clutch of notable page-turners set to hit big screens in the coming year, from literary thrillers to romantic and young adult fiction, classics to recent releases and everything in between.

The World Made Straight Based on the book by Ron Rash

After the harrowing industrial tale Serena was turned into a film in 2014 (early 2015 for U.S. audiences), Rash's earlier 2006 novel of American historical fiction is expanded from an O. Henry Prize story. David Burris makes his debut as a feature film director with Jeremy Irvine of Steven Spielberg's War Horse as high school dropout Travis and Noah Wyle (Spielberg TV project Falling Skies) the ex-teacher with a sideline in drug dealing who takes him in. Has a Jan. 9 date in the U.S.

Mortdecai Based on The Mortdecai Trilogy by Kyril Bonfiglioli

The Wodehouse-esque Charlie Mortdecai flits from page to moving picture, Johnny Depp playing the bumbling aristocratic charmer and inadvertent espionage agent tasked with the retrieval of a crucial piece of art on behalf of the British

An adaptation tailor-made for sexy librarian types: Fifty Shades of Grey, starring Jamie Dornan and Dakota Johnson, is due out in February. CONTRIBUTED government. Gwyneth Paltrow, Ewan McGregor, Olivia Munn and Paul Bettany provide further comedic support with David Koepp (Ghost Town) directing. Arriving the week of Jan. 23 for cinemagoers in select countries.

Brooklyn Based on the book by Colm Toibin

An increasingly influential figure in contemporary fiction over the last 20 years, Irish author Toibin is poised to make the transition to film as this acclaimed story of love, trust, and transatlantic choice finds its way to cinema screens courtesy of director John Crowley (Boy A), with its main roles inhabited by Saoirse Ronan (The Grand Budapest Hotel), Star Wars Episode VII man Domhnall Gleeson, and Emory Cohen (The Place Beyond the Pines). A premiere at the Sundance Film Festival late January is expected to precede more general availability later in the year.

Fifty Shades of Grey Based on the book by E. L. James

Jamie Dornan (TV series The Fall) and Dakota Johnson (The Social Network) star opposite

each other in an adaptation of the incendiary first volume of E.L. James' explicit Fifty Shades romance novels. Sam Taylor-Wood of John Lennon biopic Nowhere Boy directs from a Kelly Marcel script (Saving Mr. Banks).

The Divergent Series: Insurgent Based on Insurgent by Veronica Roth

With Mockingjay — Part 2 looming, is there room for more than one female-led young adult fiction adaptation in the year? 2014's Divergent says yes, and for 2015's instalment, Shailene Woodley and Theo James continue their search for truth in a dystopian society. Like fellow young adult fiction film versions The Hunger Games, Harry Potter and Twilight, the series' third book will be split into two parts, arriving in March of 2016 and 2017 respectively. March 20, 2015, marks the week for Divergent trilogy fans to stake out local multiplexes.

Dark Places Based on the book by Gillian Flynn

Now established as a major name in both fiction and film, Flynn's second adaptation comes hot on the heels of Gone Girl, again a murder mystery concerned with the fallibility of human witness. Starring roles for Charlize Theron, Christina Hendricks, Chloë Grace Moretz and Nicholas Hoult directed by award-winning Frenchman Gilles Paquet-Brenner. With Northern European releases already dated for March and April, an international roll-out in early 2015 remains within the realms of possibility.

Child 44 Based on the book by Tom Rob Smith

Smith's Man Booker long-listed thriller was inspired by the story of a real-life serial killer active over two decades and serves to explore life in the Soviet Union during the 1980s and '90s. Daniel Espinosa (Safe House) is bringing that to screen under the supervision of Ridley Scott, with Tom Hardy to menace in the main role with other cast members to include Noomi Rapace, Gary Oldman, Vincent Cassel, Paddy Considine, Fares Fares, Joel Kinnaman and Dev Patel. From the week of April 17.

Paper Towns Based on the book by John Green

After the success of 2014's breakout teen romance The Fault in Our Stars, John Green's novels are ripe for cinematic adaptation, with the same production team returning for Paper Towns. Nat Wolff moves up on the billing to star as Quentin Jacobsen, under the spell of enigmatic, anarchic Margo (Cara Delevingne, Anna Karenina), while Sundance award winner Jake Schreier directs. A June 5 release is set for the U.S. with other territories following in July and August.

The Maze Runner: Scorch Trials Based on The Scorch Trials by James Dashner

The second in Dashner's trilogy of futuristic dystopian survival adventures, which, in contrast to Insurgent and The Hunger Games, focuses primarily on male characters. Unafraid to alter elements of the original story for cinematic effect, the 2014 series starter led to a $340-million box office; Dylan O'Brien continues in his role as Thomas, whose group of young survivors are plunged into a second grand experiment intended to brink humanity back from the brink. International rollout begins the week of Sept. 18. AFP

My Husband's Not Gay debuts Sunday on TLC. CONTRIBUTED

Husband's Not Gay sends wrong message: activists

Television. TLC show based on two married Mormon dads who are also attracted to men draws comparisons to gay conversion therapy family he grew up in: with a father, mother and children.

"There are a lot of stories out there," Dahlgren, 32, said. "This just isn't one of them."

However, gay-rights group GLAAD says the show sends the wrong message and is a sad reminder of so-called gay conversion therapy — faith-based efforts designed to change sexual orientation that can be emotionally scarring. In 2013, New Jersey and California banned therapists from practising gay conversion therapy on children and teenagers. The American Medical Association and the American Psychological Association do not support the therapy.

"No one can change who they love, and, more importantly, no one should have to," GLAAD president Sarah Kate Ellis said in a statement. "By investing in this dangerous programming, TLC is putting countless young LGBT people in harm's way."

The organization pointed to a change.org petition asking TLC to cancel the show that so far has gathered more than 80,000 signatures.

Responding to GLAAD, the network says it will tell compelling stories about different ways of life, and the four men on the hour-long show speak only for themselves.

Megan Dahlgren says her

Quoted

"We do have a happy, healthy sex life."

Megan Dahlgren, wife of gay Mormon man featured in controversial TLC show marriage remains strong, including the physical aspects of their relationship. "We do have a happy, healthy sex life."

She suggested her upbringing in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints was a big part of why she wants to remain in the marriage.

"I would say it was part of my decision, early on especially, and a big influencer of that," she said. "It certainly helped guide me toward where I'm at today, no doubt about it."

Church spokesman Eric Hawkins said marriage is deeply personal. "While the church does not promote marriage as a treatment method for same-sex attraction, couples who are trying to be lovingly supportive of each other while being true to their religious convictions deserve our support and respect," he said.

My Husband's Not Gay is not the only show about people from Utah in unusual marriages. TLC also airs the shows Sister Wives and My Five Wives about polygamous unions. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

What's cool in winter trends

Looks. Chill nails and lips complement sleeker hair and smoky eyes this season

MARIANNE HAYES

Metro World News in New York City

Winter has officially arrived with its frigid temps. Translation: new beauty trends are upon us. Here to give you the rundown of what's trending this season is beauty blogger Angela Peters of Hairspray & High-heels. Read on for some of winter's hottest looks in hair, makeup and nails.

Hair: Polished looks and bizarre colouring

It looks like the tousled, messy hair of summer is officially behind us. Taking its place is a sleeker, more refined look that in some ways represents a return to basics.

"Everything is much more polished," says Peters. "Braids are really in, but they're tight — not the messy waterfall braids."

Subtle teasing is also guiding winter hairstyles. (Yes, teasing.) But rest easy: the '80s aren't making a comeback anytime soon. Instead, think high volume at the crown of the head, paired with super-straight hair. "It's really about a lot of crown teasing so you're getting that lift," says Peters, who describes the trend as a throwback to the '60s.

As for colour, perhaps the most eye-grabbing trend women are sporting this season is intentional grey. Everyone from Rihanna to

Baby, it's cold outside, but that doesn't mean you can't be stylish. ISTOCK

Intentional silver locks are all the rage.

Kelly Osbourne has gotten in on the silver locks.

Nails: Almond shaping and winter hues

Stars like Iggy Azalea and Rita Ora are really leading the charge when it comes to nail shaping. The truth is that longer, almond-shaped nails are rapidly replacing the shorter, straight-filed look. Mountain peak nails (a.k.a. stiletto nails) are also sweeping salons. The look is exactly what the name implies: Angular, pointy nails.

"Instead of a play on colours, the season is really going to be about nail shaping," says Peters.

"The almond shaping and mountain peak nails we're seeing really play toward that."

When it comes to nail polish, don't expect to see any major departures from last winter — lots of dark purples, emerald greens, and deep, ruby reds.

Makeup: Nude lips and played-up eyes

Winter makeup this year is surprisingly subdued, which is a fresh change from the neon lips and graphic eyeliner we saw last season.

The trend is playing out in barely-there blush and understated lipstick.

"Kylie Jenner was actually kind of ahead of the trend with the shade she's been wearing," says Peters, who's referring to the matte, almost-nude lip shade Jenner has been rocking in full force lately.

Both on the runway and off, Peters says that bright red lipstick isn't trending this season. In addition to neutral tones, we'll also be seeing deeper reds that are more earthy and brown. Eye makeup is the only area that isn't being played down this winter. Instead, heavy-handed application reigns supreme.

"Shadows are very smoked out, bold and thick with dark liner," says Peters. "Also, mascara on both the upper and lower lashes is coming back — kind of a doe-eyed '60s look."

Stuffing-Breaded Pork Chops with Pan Gravy.

If you can't stand the cold, get into the kitchen, and make this

"Dry stuffing mix makes a fine pork chop coating," write Ken Haedrich and the Old Farmer's Almanac editors in their aptly titled book Comfort Food.

For chops

1. Preheat the oven to 400 F. Line a rimmed baking sheet with foil and put it into the oven to heat.

2. Put the stuffing mix into a food processor and pulse repeatedly, until the stuffing is finely ground. Transfer to a large plate.

3. Put the beaten egg mixture into a shallow bowl (large enough to contain a chop) and set aside.

4. Pat the pork chops dry with paper towels. Lightly salt and pepper the chops on both sides and dust lightly with onion powder and garlic powder.

5. Heat a large skillet over medium heat. Add the olive oil to the skillet. (The pan should be hot, but not hot enough to burn the coating on the chops.) Working with one chop at a time, dip both sides into the egg mixture and then into the stuffing crumbs, coating it heavily. Fry the chops for 2-1/2 minutes on each side, turning once. Transfer the chops to the hot baking sheet and bake for 10 to 15 minutes, or until the internal temperature is 145

F. Remove from the oven and rest for 3 minutes.

For gravy

1. Melt the butter in the same skillet over medium heat, add the onion, and cook for 2 minutes, stirring. Add the flour and cook for 1 minute, stirring. Add the chicken stock and whisk to blend. Simmer until the gravy thickens. Add the milk, whisk to blend, and simmer for 1 to 2 minutes more, adding salt and pepper, to taste. Serve the chops with the gravy on the side.

RECIPE FROM COMFORT FOOD BY KEN HAEDRICH AND THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC EDITORS.

Ingredients

Chops

- 1-1/2 cups dry stuffing mix
- 1 egg beaten with 2 tbsp milk
- 4 pork chops (about 3/4-inch thick)
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste
- Onion powder, to taste
- Garlic powder, to taste

- 3 tbsp olive oil

Gravy

- 2 tbsp (1/4 stick) butter
- 1/4 cup minced onion
- 4 tsp all-purpose flour
- 1 cup chicken stock
- 1/3 cup milk or half-and-half
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper, to taste

This recipe serves four. BECKY LUIGART-STAYNER

Boxing legend returns home from hospital stay

Muhammad Ali is home after being hospitalized with a severe urinary-tract infection.

The three-time world heavyweight champion was released from an undisclosed hospital Tuesday night, family spokesman Bob Gunnell said Wednesday. Ali is back home and looking forward to celebrating his 73rd birthday on Jan. 17 with his family and friends, Gunnell said.

"He's in great spirits and enjoying being back home," Gunnell said. "He's back in his daily routine."

Ali has had Parkinson's disease for years.

He was hospitalized Dec. 20 with what was initially believed to be a mild case of pneumonia.

Multi-sport athletes get boost

Canadian athletes seeking Olympic and Paralympic gold in 2016 are looking forward to training in better conditions after a $3-million funding boost was announced Wednesday.

The Canadian Olympic Committee and Canadian Olympic Foundation are investing the money, along with an additional unspecified amount from the Canadian Paralympic Committee, in the newly branded Canadian Sport Institute Network. The investment is intended to provide "cutting-edge equipment," hire staff and enhance daily training for multi-sport athletes. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hufnagel on track to snag top coach trophy

CFL. Calgary boss named in final three along with Higgins and Jones

John Hufnagel, who guided the Calgary Stampeders to the CFL's best regular-season record and a Grey Cup title, was named a finalist for the CFL's coach of the year Wednesday.

Tom Higgins of the Montreal Alouettes and Chris Jones of the Edmonton Eskimos are the other finalists. The award winner will receive the Annis Stukus Trophy on Jan. 21 in Winnipeg.

Voting was conducted by 65 members of the Football Reporters of Canada.

Calgary finished atop the West Division with a 15-3 record under Hufnagel, also the club's general manager. After dispatching Edmonton 43-18 in the conference final, the Stampeders capped their season with a 20-16 victory over the Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the Grey Cup at BC Place Stadium.

This marks the fourth time Hufnagel has been nominated for the award. He won it in '08 after leading Calgary to a Grey Cup crown. He and Wally Buono, currently the B.C. Lions' general manager and vice-president of football operations, are the only coaches to lead the Stampeders to multiple championships.

Hufnagel improved his CFL coaching record to 88-37-1, moving him into 11th on the league's all-time list. His career winning percentage of .702 is tops among coaches with at least 100 career appearances on the sidelines.

"I thank the players, coaches and staff of the Stampeders for their contributions to our successful season," Hufnagel said in a statement. "The Grey Cup championship was a team effort, and my nomination for the Annis Stukus Trophy is a reflection of the great people we have throughout our organization on and off the field."

"I also congratulate Tom and Chris for their excellent coaching work and their teams' success during the 2014 season."

Glitzy Continental Cup brings golden names to Calgary

Canadian Olympic gold medalist Jennifer Jones practises on Wednesday in Calgary. THE CANADIAN PRESS

After the showgirls and the Thunder From Down Under, what's next for the Continental Cup of Curling?

What's been dubbed "the Ryder Cup of curling" was held in Las Vegas a year ago.

Bagpipes played as curlers walked through a casino. Muscular bare-chested dancers from an all-male revue led them onto the playing surface holding placards of the team names. Bikini-clad showgirls held up scores for shots in the skills competition.

The World Financial Group Continental Cup has returned to Canada where it was held its first nine years before the getaway to Vegas. The four-day competition of team, mixed doubles, hot-shots and skins games starts Thursday at the 3,000-seat Markin MacPhail Centre at Canada Olympic Park.

The Continental Cup may be back in Canada, but experimentation with it is far from over.

The Canadian Curling Association has taken over complete control of the event. Team Europe will face Team Canada, not Team North America, in Calgary.

Medal militia

Every team that stood on the Olympic podium in Sochi, Russia, last year will be in Calgary.

A total of 60 points are available, so the side that earns more than 30 points by Sunday will be the champions.

Olympic champs Jennifer Jones of Winnipeg and Brad Jacobs of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., lead a Canadian contingent, including teams skipped by world silver medallist Rachel Homan of Ottawa, Calgary's John Morris, Winnipeg's Mike McEwen and Edmonton's Val Sweeting. Canadians and Americans previously joined forces under a Team North America banner, but the tournament's backers have shifted priorities.

According to a World Curling Federation report, the governing body decided that after spending about $2 million on team costs, prize money and "share of losses" over the first decade of the Continental Cup, it no longer wanted to be involved. THE CANADIAN PRESS

There's no place like home

NFL playoffs. Four hosts this weekend all have impressive records in their own respective backyards

Along with great quarterbacks who all own Super Bowl rings, the four NFL teams hosting playoff games this weekend have a little something else on their side: An extraordinary home-field edge.

Seattle has the racket of Century Link, Green Bay the mystique of icy Lambeau. Denver's mile-high altitude and NASCAR offence benefit the Broncos. And the Patriots appreciate the biting winds and bitter cold of foreboding Foxborough, where that hoodie sure comes in handy. The four host teams are a combined 30-2 at home this season; each is at least a touch-down favourite in the divisional round.

Seattle's lone home loss was a 30-23 hiccup against Dallas during the champs' early-season stumble. The other defeat was a giveaway: New England's 19-7 loss to Buffalo in the season finale with the No. 1 seed already secured by the Patriots.

"Unnerving," is how Richard Sherman describes the sound in Seattle, which can get so loud that the Seahawks' defence has to find creative ways to make checks and calls.

Denver quit being such an

Denver Broncos QB Peyton Manning on the benefit of home advantage intimidating place to play after John Elway retired with two rings. It's a big deal again since Peyton Manning's arrival in 2012. "Our fans have been great ... they cause problems for other teams," Manning said. "Players just feed off that energy when you're playing at home. I think it makes a big difference."

Throw in the no-huddle and the lung-searing altitude and you can see why the Broncos are 24-3 at home with Manning, including 17-1 over the last two seasons.

"Playing up-tempo and then the altitude out here can really give a defence fits," said C.J. Anderson, who knows it's working when defensive linemen interlock their knuckles behind their head, heaving between snaps. Indianapolis — Denver's opponents — defensive end Cory Redding argued the altitude effect is "all in your head." But Colts coach Chuck Pagano knows better. He grew up in Boulder, Colo., and played at Wyoming, which is about 2,000 feet higher than Denver. So he knows how the thin air can affect teams.

Torres return is a Real happy one

Fernando Torres got his first win with Atletico Madrid over city rival Real Madrid on Wednesday, when the striker returned to his boyhood club in an impressive 2-0 victory in the Copa del Rey.

Midfielder Raul Garcia converted a 57th minute penalty in the first leg match of the Copa's last 16, before Jose Gimenez headed Atletico's second goal in the 76th.

Torres went off in the 59th to applause at Vicente Calderon Stadium, four minutes before Cristiano Ronaldo came on to try and spark a comeback. Torres returned to Atletico on loan from AC Milan during the winter transfer window. He never beat Madrid in nine games in his first stint with Atletico. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Capital punishment.

Washington continues domination over Toronto, now 11-4-2 in last 17 games vs. Buds

Marcus Johansson and Eric Fehr scored two goals apiece as the Washington Capitals, backed by a record-tying performance by Braden Holtby in goal, defeated Toronto 6-2 Wednesday night in the Maple Leafs' first game under interim coach Peter Horachek.

The contest, before 19,047 at the Air Canada Centre, came one day after the firing of Toronto head coach Randy Carlyle.

The Leafs started well but fell into some bad habits. Toronto also suffered from some poor finishing.

Brooks Laich and Alex Ovechkin, with an empty-net goal, also scored for Washington (21-11-7), whose road record is an impressive 12-6-3 this season.

It was Ovechkin's 20th goal of the season and 50th career point against Toronto.

The Caps extended their mastery over the Maple Leafs to 11-4-2 in the last 17 games between the two.

Holtby's 22nd straight start tied Wayne Stephenson's club record as Washington, 7-1-2 in its last 10 games, won its third in a row.

Daniel Winnik and Trevor Smith scored for Toronto (21-17-3), which has lost three straight and is 2-8-0 in its last 10. THE CANADIAN PRESS

James Harden scored 21 points, Dwight Howard had 17 points and 19 rebounds, and the Houston Rockets roared past Cleveland in the fourth quarter for a 105-93 win Wednesday night over the Cavaliers, who played their sixth straight game without LeBron James.

The Rockets broke away with a 15-5 run in the fourth and handed the Cavs their seventh loss in nine games. Corey Brewer made a pair of three-pointers and scored eight consecutive points in Houston's spree.

Bergeron lifts Bruins past Pens

Patrice Bergeron scored twice, including a deflection past Pittsburgh's Marc-Andre Fleury 2:43 into overtime, to lift the Boston Bruins to a 3-2 victory over the Penguins on Wednesday night.

Bergeron got just enough of Milan Lucic's blast from the point to put it past Fleury as the Bruins ended a three-game losing streak. Officials spent several minutes reviewing the play to make sure Bergeron's stick was below the crossbar when it made contact with the puck.

Horoscopes by Sally Brompton

♈ Aries

March 21 - April 20

Make a conscious effort to look at the bigger picture. If you don't, you could miss something important with the potential to make you rich.

♉ Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Neptune, planet of deception, warns you need to treat what you hear today with the utmost suspicion. Someone is trying to put ideas in your head that do not belong there.

♊ Gemini

May 22 - June 21

You will find yourself in a heated discussion and no way are you going to back down. Why should you when you know that you are right?

♋ Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Start planning your next major career move. The planets indicate that you know what you want and you know how to get it, so move fast and impress people in positions of authority.

♌ Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

If you argue with someone over a contentious issue today, stick to the facts. If you try to bend the truth they will find out and it will ruin your case.

♍ Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

The news you receive over the next 24 hours could be good or it could be bad — it depends entirely on how you choose to look at it. Do you see the glass as half full or half empty?

♎ Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Whatever disagreements you may have had with loved ones in recent weeks you can iron them out now. Let it be known you don't hold a grudge.

♏ Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

You need to streamline your working routine. Decide how much you can comfortably cope with and simply refuse to take on anything more than that.

♐ Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

According to the planets you will be making important decisions over the next 24 hours. The most important thing is that you make it clear to everyone that these decisions are not open to discussion.

♑ Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

For some reason you appear to believe that everyone thinks and feels the same as you but what occurs over the next day or two will put you right.

♒ Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Today's Mercury-Neptune link warns you need to be careful with money, so keep your cash in your pocket no matter how much others insist this is the ideal time to spend.

♓ Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

You won't hesitate to speak your mind today — and quite right too. The one thing you can't stand is injustice and you won't turn a blind eye to it.
